

This young man changed iPhone batteries and was extremely sad because Apple did not speak soon

Blame me that I didn't ask first, but Apple should also say clearly how the repair can help the old iPhone.

This is the story of a guy who changed the battery for the old iPhone 6S at Apple's store.

Two weeks ago, I went to Apple Store to replace the new battery. The next day, I realized how old the battery made my device useless.

This restored things that gradually disappeared so I didn't realize. As long as I touch, the application runs, not running according to their liking. The keyboard didn't work when I replied to Outlook. I don't have to plug in the charger all day. The battery also surprised me when dropped from 40% to 0% just because it was cold outside. I trusted my phone again, but not for Apple.

The reason I went to replace the battery was that in December last year a developer discovered that the iOS upgrade slowed down the iPhone. This confirms that Apple has adjusted old devices to force users to buy new devices. In the face of press pressure, Apple said it only slowed down the computer to avoid a source shutdown.

1. Apple received the error, replaced the battery for only $ 29, what did Apple fans think?
2. Evidence shows that Apple deliberately slowed down the old iPhone when the battery bottle

According to Apple, old worn-out components on the old iPhone forced them to choose between speed and stability: slow but steady or speedy but unstable. They chose the first one but did not tell the customer.

Next is Apple's apology with a cheap battery replacement program and software updates that allow users to choose by themselves. Sorry, but it still shows that Apple treats users too badly.

Before changing the battery, I was going to buy a new iPhone. Now I will wait at least until 2019. Only $ 30 saved me hundreds of dollars, but why doesn't Apple say it early? I pay for AppleCare to protect and preserve the phone, but nobody says anything about changing the battery.

If you think 'What do you think they have to tell you?' yes, they are not my friends. And no phone manufacturer took the repair to improve the speed of the machine as a reason for people to buy their products. Most operate with high sales and low profits, so they need you to buy new products. It is not surprising that Apple does not speak.

But that's not a good thing, especially for a company that makes a lot of profit from selling phones, promoting that it protects the environment, prides itself on customer satisfaction. Apple said 'We always want customers to use iPhone for as long as possible'. So why not make it easier to repair and replace?

The way Apple responds to customer anger is praised, but it also shows that they can do more. Smartphone technology has reached its peak and the general trend is that we will use the phone longer instead of buying a new one. That is, the repair and replacement will become more and more important.

1. If you don't want to be able to turn off the battery management feature slow down the iPhone
2. How to know Apple is slowing down your iPhone?

Apple should be more proactive in telling customers what they are doing with users' devices instead of forcing customers to upgrade their devices. They always say for the sake of customers, so why not prove it?

Changes in the way Apple advertises battery replacement can make us think differently about smartphones. Not one thing is finished and discarded (very harmful to the environment) but something like a car, something that we should maintain and maintain. When it launched a new battery replacement program, Apple said it wanted to "regain the trust of anyone who doubts Apple's intentions." Perhaps they can do more.
