

To activate eSIM on the phone

How to activate eSIM will help you use the SIM without having to attach a physical sim to the device

For those of you who don't know what eSIM is, it's a type of SIM that helps mobile devices connect to network services but in a very special way. Instead of having to remove and install it like a normal physical sim, the eSIM is integrated into the hardware of the device.

Previously, eSIMs were often used only in connecting the machine to the machine. With eSIM, users will not have to change the SIM when making a subscription to another carrier. These eSim will be able to be programmed and activated remotely.

However, not all phone models are integrated eSIM, currently there are only a few phones that integrate eSIM such as iPhone Xs, Xs Max, Xr international versions. Google Pixel 2, Pixel 2 XL or even on Smartwatch models. Smartphone models will be integrated with 1 normal physical sim and 1 eSIM.

Recently, Viettel and VinaPhone announced that they will provide eSIM services to domestic iPhone users, in which Viettel has reached an agreement with Apple to provide eSIM users with their products. In addition, with Vinaphone, this network is still discussing with Apple in order to soon implement the integration of eSIM in Vietnam market.
