

To turn on vibrating alert when receiving and ending calls on Samsung

If you have never experienced this exciting feature, you can turn on the vibrating alert feature when receiving and ending Samsung calls with a very simple operation in the article below.

Vibration is a smart feature for phones. In particular, the vibration notification feature when receiving and ending calls on Samsung also allows users to know whether they have connected or ended the call or not to be more active in each phone call to relatives and friends. . If you have never experienced this exciting feature, you can turn on the vibrating alert feature when receiving and ending Samsung calls with a very simple operation in the article below.

1. How to copy contacts from sim to Samsung phone
2. How to limit call time on Samsung phones
3. How to check warranty period on Samsung phones

Instructions to turn on vibrating alert when receiving and ending calls on Samsung phones

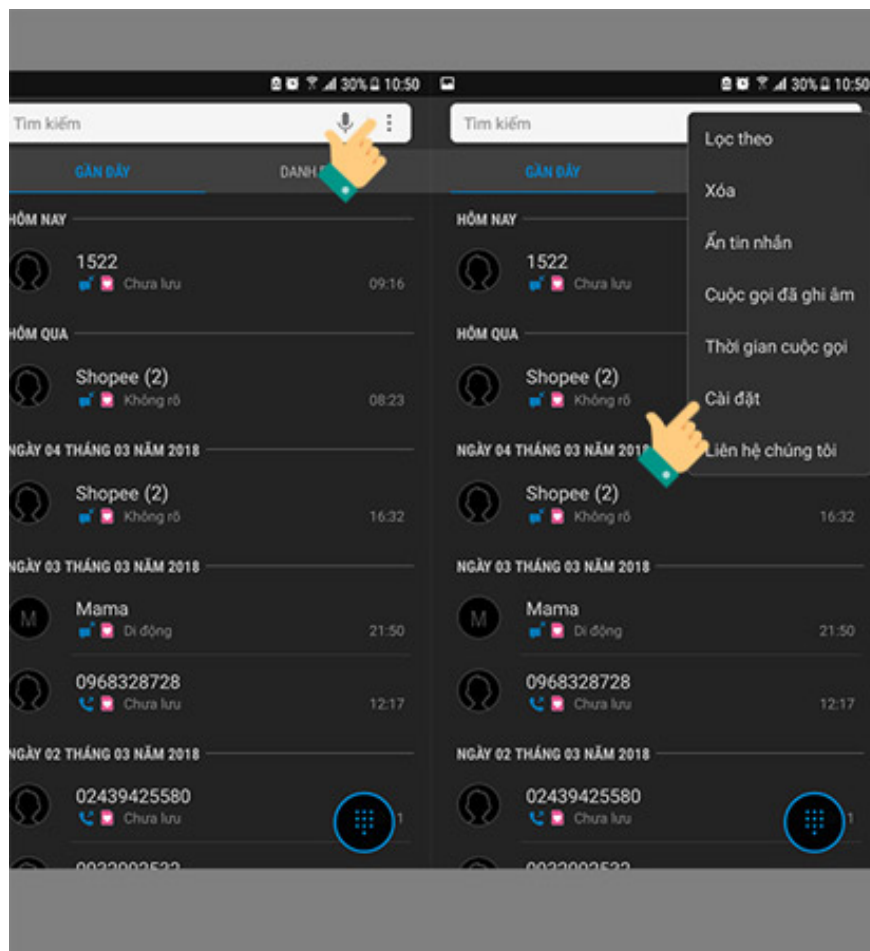

Step 1:

Open the calling app as shown in the picture.

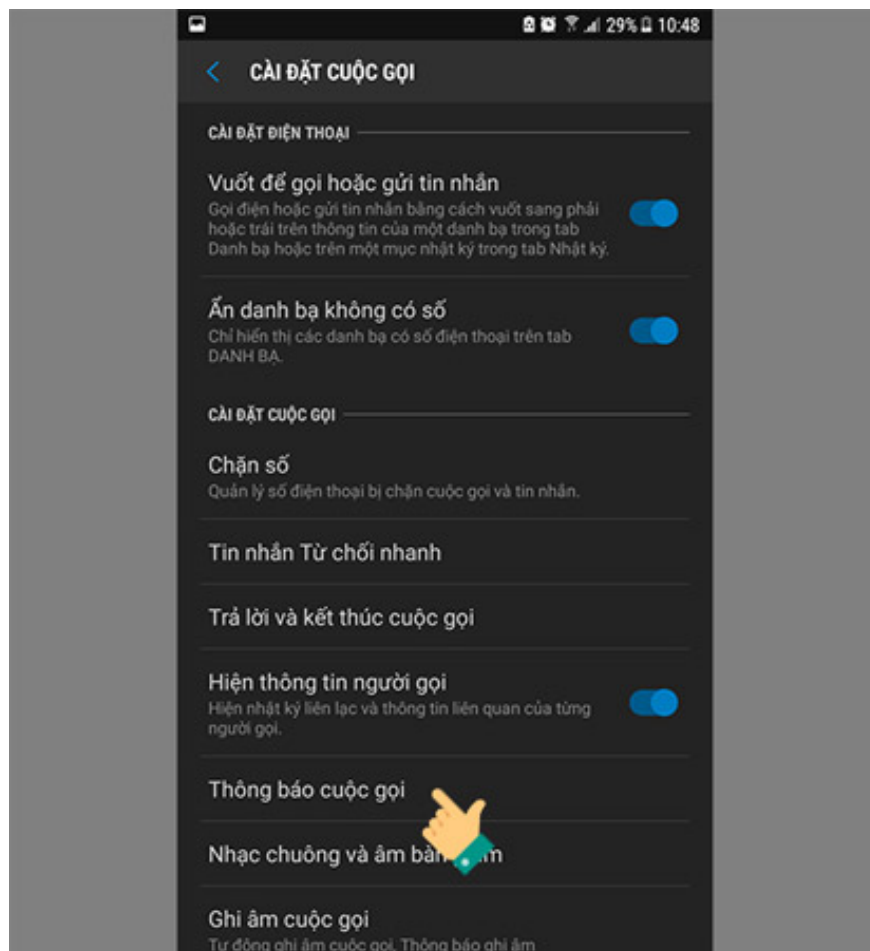

Step 2:

Select the Three dots icon and continue to select Settings.

Step 3:

At the Call settings view, you activate Call notification .

Step 4:

Now set the Vibration when reply and R options when the call ends to complete the steps.

So, with just 4 simple steps above, you can turn on the vibrating alert when receiving and ending the call on your Samsung phone. From now on when receiving the call, the phone will vibrate and when the call ends it will also vibrate the notification so you can easily identify it. Isn't it wonderful?

I wish you all success!

See more:

1. Small tips for adding background music when opening apps on Android
2. Instructions to fix Android phone error virtual battery alert
3. 5 tips to improve sound quality on Android phones without Root

You finished reading the article "To turn on vibrating alert when receiving and ending calls on Samsung" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.