

Top 25 best animated movies

The past period has been a thriving decade of animation. Big names like Disney / Pixar have dominated this field and produced many great movies.

The past period has been a thriving decade of animation. Big names like Disney / Pixar have dominated this field and produced many great movies. But besides, studios like Laika are still growing and gaining influence.

However, the most important thing is still the quality of the movies. In recent years, fans have enjoyed a number of high quality works, from many studios, countries and with different artistic visions.

Now, the decade is almost over. Join TipsMake.com to collect a list of popular animated films, released from 2010 to 2019. From cultural phenomena to some very strange things, this list includes hobbies for all the anime fans are watching. Let's explore the details through the following article!

The best cartoons of the decade

1. 25. Secret training of dragon 2 (2014)
2. 24. Batman: Confronting the Red Mask (2010)
3. 23. Frozen (2013)
4. 22. The Teen Titans Superhero Squad (2018)
5. 21. Assumption of lagging (2012)
6. 20. Sheep from the countryside (2015)
7. 19. Walking the streets at night (2017)
8. 18. Dragon training tips (2010)
9. 17. The children of wolves (2012)
10. 16. Brave (2012)
11. 15. Journey of Moana (2016)
12. 14. Anomalisa - Pieces of Loneliness (2015)
13. 13. Paranorman And The Sixth Sense (2012)
14. 12. Island Of Dogs (2018)
15. 11. Rango - Gecko geckos (2011)
16. 10. Floating wind (2013)
17. 9. World of Tomorrow (2015)
18. 8. Lego Story (2014)
19. 7. Kubo And the Samurai Mission (2016)
20. 6. What's your name? (2016)
21. 5. Dynamic mission (2016)
22. 4. Toy story 3 (2010)
23. 3. The miraculous meeting (2017)

24. 2. emotional pieces (2015)

25. 1. Spiderman: New Universe (2018)

25. Secret training of dragon 2 (2014)

Instead of following the same formula as the first movie with great success, Dean DeBlois' sequel, expanding the scope of the story, while preserving the emotions, depth and cuteness of the series. the movie, making Dragon Train Secretary (English name is How to Train Your Dragon) great. The meticulousness of this animated series makes the audience look forward to seeing the sequel.

24. Batman: Confronting the Red Mask (2010)

DC makes a lot of direct-to-video animations (directly released in home video format instead of theater or television broadcast), but most of them don't attract much attention. . But Batman: confronting the Red Mask (English name is Batman: Under The Red Hood) takes on the task of adapting one of the darkest stories in Caped Crusader history, and solving some very real questions about Ethics of Batman.

23. Frozen (2013)

The film follows a princess with the mission to save the magical kingdom from eternal winter. The impact of this film is so great that even people who have never seen it know its existence. Of all the animated films that will be released this decade, the Frozen Queen (whose English name is Frozen) becomes the biggest cultural phenomenon, because none of us can resist the charm. Its mesmerizing charm.

22. The Teen Titans Superhero Squad (2018)

Deadpool movies famous for the fun of superheroes and the Teen Titans Superhero Squad (English name for Teen Titans Go! To the Movies) also deserve a compliment. This is a movie that makes every member of the family feel happy. DC has focused on creating interesting details in recently released films. And to produce an interesting movie like this, surely the person who made it must have an extremely 'muddy' mind.

21. Assumption of lagging (2012)

The smashing bustle (Wreck-It Ralph) was released at a time when video games were very advanced, but it reminded older audiences of childhood memories with used slot machines. The film revolves around Ralph - who is the villain - wants to change to become a hero.

20. Sheep from the countryside (2015)

Continuing the tradition of films like Babe 2: Pig in the City and Homeward Bound II: Lost in San Francisco , Shaun the Sheep Movie is an interesting story about animals exploring life. in an urban environment. This movie is considered quite bold compared to a mainstream children's film, because it does not contain any dialogue. It proves that, making jokes with pictures is often more creative and fun.

19. Walking the streets at night (2017)

Based on a novel by Tomihiko Morimi, this romantic comedy by Masaaki Yuasa tells the story of two college students - a boy and a girl - during the evening. The boy planned to show his romantic feelings for the girl, but a series of strange situations kept them apart.

The plot is very simple, but Walking the streets of the night (English name: The Night is Short, Walk on Girl) is like a dream, leading viewers through a strange and surreal scene. Part of the image is reminiscent of Ralph Bakshi, but Yuasa deserves praise for creating his own style.

18. Dragon training tips (2010)

The secret to dragon training is that the movie narrowed the gap between Dreamworks and Pixar. The main character is Hiccup, a Viking boy who doesn't quite fit the standards of a male man that society demands, but the real star is Toothless, a small dragon, beautifully shaped with an look and act just like the real thing.

17. The children of wolves (2012)

It's undeniable that Miyazaki is a big name in Japanese animation, but Mamoru Hosoda is also an equally inferior director. Integrating hand-drawn style with CGI art, Hosoda has a knack for creating colorful, rich worlds, with additional details for magical, emotional and equally thrilling stories. .

Wolf Mother is a story about a single mother, revolving around a widow and two children, while trying to adapt to the normal life in the countryside. Of course, this is difficult when both children often turn into wolves. Besides exploring the challenges of parenting, this is also a film full of warmth and love.

16. Brave (2012)

Brave (Brave) marked Pixar's first real Disney movie, after being bought by House of Mouse. The film contains many imprints of old Disney fairy tales - princesses, wizards, etc. - and that's not a bad thing. The film gives the audience a rich experience filled with powerful characters, beautiful animation and deep moments.

15. Journey of Moana (2016)

Moana's journey is undoubtedly a Disney success. The first complete CGI film by Ron Clements and John Musker, Moana, contained a great respect for Polynesian culture. The film content is the journey to discover themselves and the age of heroine Moana. Besides being an exciting adventure in the classic Disney paradigm, Moana marks hopes of starting a new era of respect for other cultures in Disney movies.

14. Anomalisa - Pieces of Loneliness (2015)

Comedy movie - Charlie Kaufman's stop-motion-type drama (drama stills) follows a customer service specialist who cares only for himself and sees everyone on earth the same - for until he had a one-night stand with a woman who made him feel like he was alive again. However, the fun did not last too long. Kaufman's pessimism does not allow such events to change the character's worldview, and we know that many broken hearts will never be healed. Anomalisa is a clumsy, annoying, but humorous and engaging person in a way that only Kaufman's films can describe.

13. Paranorman And The Sixth Sense (2012)

In addition to being one of the best animated films of the decade, Paranorman and The 6th Sense is also one of the best horror movies of the last few years. However, ParaNorman's approach is still very child-friendly. The message ParaNorman wants to convey is: Be yourself, no matter how weird others feel, because it makes you special. Every age group can see this movie has a certain meaning.

12. Island Of Dogs (2018)

The fairly simple plot in the Isle of Dogs (Vietnamese name is Island of Dogs) is reinforced by the vocal performance of Bryan Cranston, when the dog he voiced led the boy Atari Kobayashi (Koyu Rankin) away. through places on a wonderful friendship journey, overcoming language barriers.

11. Rango - Gecko geckos (2011)

Johnny Depp is in charge of the voice of the tiny character, a chameleon who is going through a crisis because the dream of becoming a hero has been lost. However, when he came to the town of Dirt West, with his talking skills, Rango was elected police chief and faced many difficulties afterwards.

10. Floating wind (2013)

Floating Wind (English name is The Wind Rise) is a sharp contrast to most of Hayao Miyazaki's films to date. The magical magic in his previous works was absent, instead being a quiet storyline about the life of an airplane engineer. However, the film still has a fictional element.

The main character, Jiro Horikoshi (a real-life historical figure who was also the designer of the fighter aircraft that Japan used during World War II), often dreamed of flying and imagining the aircraft designer. Giovanni Caproni is beside me. Despite the controversy, The Wind Rise is considered a masterful animation.

9. World of Tomorrow (2015)

At a glance, World of Tomorrow looks pretty basic compared to the other animated series released this decade. Computer-generated rods and images aren't too complicated, but that makes this movie unique. The film tells the story of a little girl, gets an adult version of herself on a time-travel trip, and together makes an adventure to the future. Writer and director Don Hertzfeldt recorded the real-life image of his 4-year-old granddaughter when creating the film, and with innocent and childish words, he told a story full of meaning and thoughts. stimulate thinking about life.

8. Lego Story (2014)

Although the title implies an ad for a toy company, the Lego Story (English name is The Lego Movie) has captured the hearts of the audience, with the ability to quote meme level and charm. nostalgia. Australia's Animal Logic has pioneered a unique pseudo-stop-motion style animation to bring Lego world to life.

7. Kubo And the Samurai Mission (2016)

In addition to simulating many traditional Japanese art forms such as woodblocks and ink paintings, the film also features excellent action scenes and a 16-legged skeleton monster puppet that needs a special robot. to move. Kubo and the Samurai Mission (Kubo and the Two String in English) could set the standard for the stop-motion genre for the next decade.

6. What's your name? (2016)

Makoto Shinkai's body-shifting romantic comedy features some of the best artwork ever shown. Shinkai brings a brilliant feeling of light and darkness. This, combined with the lovable rendition of the background, makes the film more fantastic than it actually is. The two main characters Mitsuha Miyamizu (Mone Kamishiraishi) and Taki Tachibana (Ryunosuke Kamiki) seem to be caught up in a fairly popular romantic comedy script, but one surprise leads to an extremely stressful ending.

5. Dynamic mission (2016)

Surely you would never expect a movie about talking animals to bring the message of racism and prejudice, but that is exactly what the movie The Secret Life of Pets (English name) is Zootopia) did it.

Set in an imaginative world full of human-like animals, the Zootopia mission takes it a step further than classic Disney characters like Mickey, Donald and Goofy, exploring systems of The implications and consequences of a society full of prejudice through the eyes of the police Judy Hopps, the first bunny to do the work are usually done by large animals.

A number of high-end technologies have been used in the creation of this movie, including a specially designed fur show called iGroom. In addition to Disney's outstanding design and animation, some of the characters with serious expressions present a surprisingly attractive appeal.

4. Toy story 3 (2010)

For 15 years, the audience witnessed Andy's toys being abandoned, one after another, because he grew up like all other children and no longer needed them. But they still need the boy. It was a touching journey, true and pure. It is hard to imagine such an adventurous animation series as being able to capture the desire to return to the childhood of such an effective person so effectively.

3. The miraculous meeting (2017)

Directed by Lee Unkrich, the film The Miraculous Reunion (in English: Coco) is a story about chasing a dream, as well as giving reflection on life and death. The important thing is that children's movies have to find a way to solve the serious problems such as death in a way that is gentle, skillful and Coco succeeds with surprise in that regard.

The story is about a boy who is taken to the land of the dead, where he meets some new friends, former family members and his idol. The fantasy film of the dead is very lively and interesting, plus some intriguing songs are ingeniously included.

2. emotional pieces (2015)

If there is something certain in this life, then it is inevitable change. The change can be happy, sad, scary, and in some cases, all of the above. But that was inevitable, and this was the main theme of the emotional puzzle pieces (English name: Inside Out).

The story is about an 11-year-old girl, forced to settle down in another city when her father takes a new job. This move gives her 5 core emotions - all of which are colorful personified into characters with their own personalities. What the audience draws after enjoying this movie is that regardless of age, any situation in life, it's sometimes natural for you to feel uncomfortable.

1. Spiderman: New Universe (2018)

Spiderman: New Universe (English name: Spider-Man: Into the Spider-Verse). This 2018 masterpiece brings Miles Morales to the big screen for the first time, along with a truly moving story of heroism, friendship and family. The film is a mix of traditional animation and CGI that makes the audience excited to watch, even when the sound is turned off.

See more:

1. 8 detective movies will make you smarter
2. The best movies about the programming world

You finished reading the article "Top 25 best animated movies" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.