Decided you want a MacBook but can't decide between the MacBook Air and MacBook Pro? Here are some suggestions from Laptop Mag experts.

Apple's current laptop lineup includes the 13.6-inch and 15.3-inch MacBook Air; two versions of the MacBook Pro: 14.2-inch and 16.2-inch.

The MacBook Air line is powered by an M2 or M3 chip, while the MacBook Pro 14 and 16 are powered by an M4, M4 Pro, or M4 Max chip. Only the MacBook Pro models offer the more powerful 'Pro' or 'Max' chip. The MacBook Pro 14 blurs that line with the standard M4 chip. There's nothing bad about Apple's current lineup, so whether you choose a MacBook Air or a MacBook Pro, it's a no-brainer.

The 14-inch MacBook Pro M4 and 16-inch MacBook Pro M4 Pro are the latest additions to Apple's lineup, and both are great options for productivity users. The 13-inch MacBook Air M3, on the other hand, is still the recommended choice for most people. Its affordable price, thin yet durable design, excellent performance, and long battery life make it a great buy.

Below is a ranking of the 5 best MacBook models, most worth owning in early 2025:

Price from: 24.99 million VND

The MacBook Air M3 is the MacBook most people should buy right now. The M3 chip delivers solid performance for most users. Combined with over 15 hours of battery life and a super bright Retina display, it's a pretty compelling and affordable option for many iFans.

2. MacBook Air M2 - The best budget MacBook
