Imposter has the advantage of many skills but not so that it is easy to win Among Us. Here are 5 Tips for Imposter

Among Us is one of the most popular games as of October and is a game with simple rules. Up to eight players will play the role of the Crew members and board a ship or space station, trying to find out who the damaging Imposter is (numbers one to three).

As the Crew members move around the map in Among Us to complete their quest, Impostors attempt to sabotage and defeat them anonymously. If the impostor successfully destroys all of the Crew members undetected, he wins the game.

Becoming an impostor in Among Us requires a lot of trick skills, know-how about the mechanics of the game and knowledge of locations on the map. In this article, we'll discuss some of the most obnoxious tips and tricks for playing as an Imposter.

1. Pretend to be on duty

A gamer can easily get rid of human crime and confuse the Crewmates if he pretends to be on a mission throughout the game. It increases the likelihood of an alibi, and so during an emergency discussion or meeting, an impostor can use this alibi to prove his innocence.

2. Sneak down another player in the middle of a crowd

When several players are near each other, you should take advantage and destroy. When a bunch of Crew members stood in one place, they arranged one behind the other so that the people in the back seemed to be hidden.

If the impostor took down a crew member at that time, it would be almost impossible to find out who cut the body, as there would be many crewmen standing almost on top of each other. This will create skepticism while voting for an eliminated player.

3. Watch out for the camera

Impostors should not ignore the presence of the cameras in the map The Skeld and Polus in Among Us. Players may notice a number of cameras hanging on the walls of both maps, but the Imposter should be very careful not to stab anyone in front of these devices.

If flashing red lights appear on these cameras, gamers should be wary because someone might be watching.

4. Vent pipe

The vents are one of the game's most beneficial features in Among Us, and every Imposter should know how to use them. The player can use the post-kills vent, for an easy getaway, but he / she must ensure that no one sees him / her venting his anger.

After going down the vents, tapping the arrows to choose your preferred room to escape and hiding will help keep the Imposter game alive.

5. Use vandalism wisely

Vandalism is always encouraged as an impostor among us, whenever possible, but gamers must be wise in using this feature properly. After defeating the crew, they can touch the destructive map and sabotage the position on the pole opposite the kill point.

The idea is to divert attention away from the gamer's body and delay the time it takes to find the body, so that in the meantime, the Imposter could mingle with the crew and create alibis to blow the suspicions away.
