Learning through forums (forums) is a way of online education for a long time. Currently it still promotes the effect of learning thanks to the high interaction of the user community on the forum. People voluntarily help each other in answering questions and questions encountered during the learning process. One thing is certain that no matter how you study it, you can gain knowledge in the way you want. The forum is also a place to provide useful advice on how to plan an educational program or choose a study program.

When the forums in the form of websites gradually go down, there is an emerging trend, more and more popular, that is the group on Facebook. Users participating in these groups can easily share knowledge, learn from each other's experiences about certain common concerns.

5. Big data (Big Data)

Currently on the Internet there are millions of online learners through websites, the trend of collecting data from a large number of users to help develop a learning system. According to the model of the previous learner, a learning plan can be created based on the level of students tested through various tests. Based on that, people will analyze and produce more effective courses for each level. So the learning and testing process is happening automatically and better for each learner.

6. Learn fast

Learning the community , finding solutions quickly while learning is the process of perfecting every day. Studies show that the most effective learning time is 20 minutes because the concentration is higher than other times. So it is easy to understand why lectures are designed with videos of 5 to 20 minutes in length. Teachers will fully solve the problem during that time and it is a very effective way of teaching. Unlike long lectures, these lectures are mainly focused on covering everything at a time.

So, this is the trend that can be expected in 2018. Certainly the increase in the number of online learners increases, especially when companies are looking for ways to teach some of the skills needed for employees. their. Remember to be careful with phishing scams, try to visit reliable sites with research information and avoid unsafe and unusual payment methods.
