TOP best Ash Of War skills in Elden Ring

Bloodhound's Step

Bloodhound's Step is the ideal Ash of War if players are looking to upgrade their dodging strategy. This Ash of War skill makes the character become blurred so it will be easier to dodge the attacks that come in his way.

If you need to cross a path with tough enemies, then Bloodhound's Step is a great choice. The character will not take any more damage than necessary while on the way to the boss battle arena. Gamers can steal this Ash of War from the Night Cavalry boss at Lenne's Rise.

Thunderbolt

This Ash of War works by throwing weapons into the sky to summon a bolt of lightning that strikes any enemy the player chooses. This is extremely convenient if you don't want to get close to some heavyweights to save HP.

Although it costs a bit FP, but Thunderbolt is well worth owning. It is located at Leyndell, Royal Capital, near the Avenue Balcony area of the Site of Grace. The player must kill a scarab to get it.

Gravitas

The player can obtain this Ash of War skill fairly early in the game as it is located near the Seaside Ruins, in the southern part of Limgrave. By the sea, everyone will see a Slender Wayfarer roaming around, and using this Ash of War, so defeating it will grant you the Gravitas skill.

Gravitas creates a gravitational field that draws enemies in, before unleashing a surge of attacks that deal massive damage. So, if you find yourself overwhelmed by a large group of enemies, let Gravitas help everyone out of the situation.

Seppuku

While the use of Seppuku Ash of War may seem a bit scary at first, stabbing yourself will greatly strengthen the weapon. With a small amount of HP, the weapon will now be able to deal bleed and build damage, cutting a large portion of the enemy's health in a few hits.

A dex weapon combined with this Ash of War skill will be potentially lethal. So if you want Seppuku, navigate to Freezing Lake in Mountaintops of the Giants. Then kill the invisible scarab and get this Ash of War skill.
