

TOP biomes suitable for building houses in Minecraft 1.18 Caves and Cliffs

With the Minecraft 1.18 Caves and Cliffs update, Mojang introduced 8 new biome biomes in their open world survival game. This is the biggest update of the game in a long time, with a new world generation, changes in ore distribution, new biomes

Minecraft 1.18 update has 6 new mountain biomes and 2 cave biomes. With these exciting biomes and a brand new revamp of the world generation, players will have plenty of new space to create different types of buildings and structures. The following are the best biomes for building houses in Minecraft 1.18 Caves and Cliffs.

TOP biomes should build houses in Minecraft 1.18

Dripstone Cave

While Dripstone Cave is one of the deadliest biomes introduced in the Minecraft 1.18 update, it's also a great place to make a lair for evil. The player can create a safe house with sharp drip stones to protect it from hostile mobs. Various unique building ideas can appear in this dangerous biome.

Meadow

The Meadow biome is a stark contrast to the Dripstone Cave biome. This is the safest and easiest biome to build a house. The player can get a beautiful area filled with lush green flowers and wonderful views of the mountains in the background. This biome is usually created at the foot of a mountain, so it is the flattest of the newly added biomes.

Jagged Peak

One of the hardest biomes to overcome in the Minecraft 1.18 update is the Jagged Peak biome. Players can build some incredibly creative houses in this creepy and dangerous looking biome. One advantage of building a home on a mountaintop biome is that it's hard for hostile mobs or other players to reach the player's base easily.

Frozen Peak

The Minecraft 1.18 Caves and Cliffs update brings in some extra mountain biomes with loads of snow and ice, one of which is Frozen Peak. This is a beautiful biome to make a snow-white mountain home like the famous Frozen movie. The player can build an igloo, a white modern house, a dark brown oak hut, etc. All the structures look great on this biome. White snow with blue ice makes this biome unique and eye-catching.

Lush Cave

Lush Cave can definitely win the title of best biome added in Minecraft 1.18 Caves and Cliffs update. With gently glowing red berries, rhododendron bushes and adorable Axolotls swimming in puddles, this biome could be the perfect abode for the player. Gamers can make small wooden huts covered with vines to look more realistic.

You finished reading the article "TOP biomes suitable for building houses in Minecraft 1.18 Caves and Cliffs" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.