

Toshiba officially sells 2-screen laptops in the US

A week after its launch in Japan, Toshiba today announced the launch of the world's first Libretto W100 dual-screen laptop in the US market.

A week after its launch in Japan, Toshiba today announced the launch of the world's first Libretto W100 dual-screen laptop in the US market.

Libretto W105 (Japanese version is the Libretto W100) with a clamshell design, compact with 2 flexible touch screens. The bottom screen can completely become a virtual keyboard like Apple's iPad tablet. The Libretto W100 is no different from a dual-screen tablet.

Starting from August 16, W105 was officially sold in the US market and received orders via ToshibaDirect.com website. Toshiba said it will also appear at retail stores on August 29 at a price of $ 1099.99.

US Libretto version specifications are slightly different from those sold in Japan, a Toshiba spokesman revealed. Accordingly, this model in the US market will only come with 1 battery (8 cell battery) larger than the Japanese model makes the weight of the machine bigger. The US version will not support WiMAX wireless network.

The Libretto W105-L251 is sold on the Toshiba US website running on Windows 7 Home Premium operating system, using Intel Pentium U5400 dual-core processor, DDR3 2GB RAM, 62GB SSD, 2 touch-screen monitors 7-inch LED Backlit backlight technology with 1024 x 600 pixel resolution. In addition, it is equipped with Webcam, microphone, supports 802.11b / g / n Wi-Fi, Bluetooth V2.1 and many other features.

In the middle of the 7th week, Toshiba has also launched the world's first 2-screen laptop in Vietnam.

Images of Toshiba Libretto W105 dual-screen laptop:

Source: CNet

You finished reading the article "Toshiba officially sells 2-screen laptops in the US" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.
