When Wes Trevor, the owner of the plantation brought back the herd of eight young pigs, they were stained, sunburned and in bad health. He is quite surprised to find that the Treasure Treasure follows them all day as they leave the barn and start to look after them.

Trevor said, Treasure is like a mother and begins to take care of pigs. Its body immediately releases milk when the pig herd snuggles into its head. Meanwhile, Treasure licked the piglets just like a real mother.

Trevor consulted the veterinarian about this strange case. According to the doctor, the feeding process can take place normally, if Treasure does not hurt and the pigs are fed enough.

Treasure was a stray dog ??adopted by Trevor 18 months ago, so he didn't know if he had ever been a mother before. This may be the first time Treasure has become a reluctant adoptive mother, but it has done a great job in her role and has always been friendly with other animals in the plantation.
