A small bar has just appeared on the terrace in New York America, causing local worshippers and city people to cry because of their "beautiful, poisonous and strange".

Accordingly, this small bar named Bar 54 , located right on the roof of the highest hotel in New York City is the Hyatt hotel .

Inspired by the winter cold and the unique shape of the eggs cocoons, Bar 54 was born with interesting beauty and humiliation.

Overall, it is a ball shaped like an egg cocoon, round shape, woven from a specialized PVC weathered material, on the glossy side is sewn, attached to form protruding umbrellas and edges. a beautiful, meticulous, cozy feature for the whole egg cocoon surface.

Right at the top of the cocoon fruit, there is only one door, designed with curving arch, harmonizing with the middle structure of the egg cocoon, not like the wooden door or glass door we often see.

According to the architect of the project, there are two egg cocoons scattered on the Hyatt hotel terrace area, each of which can hold up to 2 to 5 diners.

Inside the cocoon, there is also a system of plastic metal tables and chairs, a stand-up table, all with pure white colors such as frost, harmoniously coordinating with the whole design idea.

With glossy material made from special-purpose PCV plastic, weather-resistant, visitors come here to enjoy whether day or night are protected by heat, feel comfortable, cool, winter, extremely night cozy, interior space is equally luxurious and modern.
