

Unpacking tips for beginners

Unpacking is a zen puzzle game about the familiar experience of taking things out of a box and organizing them into a new home.

The game that combines puzzles and home decoration has gained a lot of fans. Players will be able to personally create a comfortable living space of their own, while learning clues about the life they are discovering.

In this article, let's find out the Unpacking tips that beginners need to know to make the arrangement of furniture in the open house simpler and more neat.

Tips for playing Unpacking

Plan your furniture arrangement in advance

Just like when opening bins in real life, some people tend to just rush into organizing and cleaning immediately without thinking about what they're doing or where they're putting everything.

This is a more enjoyable and less stressful approach, but it creates problems down the road that make chores significantly more time consuming.

To avoid falling into this trap of unplanned work, Unpacking players should take some time to observe the entire house, open every drawer, and know the space they have to work before even thinking about working. Open the first box.

Utensils cannot be randomly placed

Continuing from the previous tip, players who rush to arrange items randomly will run into a lot of trouble, as some items have to be placed in a specific location, in accordance with their function.

When all boxes have been opened and all items have been placed, the incorrect arrangement will flash red. Therefore, players should take the time to check every item logically and think logically about where most people would put it in their home.

The items may not be in the bin of the respective room

Unfortunately, putting items in the right place is easier said than done, as the protagonist doesn't always pack them into the bin of the respective room. Even though most things are properly packed, there can still be times when a pair of socks are lost in the kitchen or a set of pens in the bathroom.

Instead of straining, trying in vain to figure out where to put the socks in the kitchen, see if they are properly binned and look elsewhere for their designated location.

Not every space saving is immediately obvious

One problem players will encounter at every level is trying to find space for everything. Those who don't think carefully will run into problems soon, as each stage leaves little room for error. Therefore, any available space should be utilized.

One space some players will miss is underneath each nightstand, which provides handy hiding spots. Another space-saving trick is to pack the toothbrush and toothpaste into one cup over the bathroom sink, which saves a lot of space for the protagonist's numerous creams and hair products.

You finished reading the article "Unpacking tips for beginners" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.