Last night at the "VAIO Duo 13 - Signature" event, Sony Electronics Vietnam officially introduced the new VAIO Duo series with a 13-inch screen size. This is considered the successor to the Duo 11 series, which debuted in the past with many positive changes.

VAIO Duo 13 is a hybrid laptop with a slider design that promises to overcome the weaknesses of Duo 11, such as the " Surf Slide " hinge that makes it easier for users to set up the screen with one hand to switch between the two. Laptop or tablet mode.

In addition, the Duo 13's size is about the same as its predecessor and is only a bit heavier than the Duo 11 (1.32 kg compared to 1.3 kg of Duo 11) because the screen border of the device has been recorded. smaller. In addition, the company also applies carbon fiber materials for this product to make it more durable.

Some design enhancements, Duo 13, have added a position that allows users to leave the stylus and accessories missing on Duo 11. While other Sony laptops use IPS panels. The Duo 13 is equipped with Sony's Triluminos technology (previously used on Bravia TV series). The screen also uses the X-Reality processing engine available on some Xperia phones.

In terms of configuration, Duo 13 will have two different color versions. The black VAIO Duo 13 version will have a more robust configuration, including Intel's Core i7 processor and 3G connectivity next to NFC available on both devices.

In contrast, the white Duo 13 will carry only the Intel Core i5 processor and no SIM slot. The main camera of Duo with 8 MP resolution with Exmor RS sensor and secondary camera allows 1080p video recording. Regarding battery life, Sony promises Duo 13 will work up to 12 hours thanks to Active Sleep technology.

VAIO Duo 13 will be officially distributed in Vietnam in mid-July 2013, including two versions: SVD13211SGW (Intel® Core™ i5, white, price 34.990.000 VND) and SVD13217PGB (Intel® Core™ i7 , black, price 49.990.000 VND).
