

Verizon launches a durable phone, G'zOne Ravine

Casio G'zOne Ravine folding phone is water-resistant, high-temperature, strong vibrating and supports Verizon's Push-to-Talk system.

Verizon said it will receive a super-durable Casio G'zOne Ravine phone distribution this month.

Casio G'zOne Ravine phone. (Photo: Engadget).

Casio G'zOne Ravine phones resist dust, water, high temperatures, strong vibrations and support Verizon's Push-to-Talk system.

It also has a text-to-speech feature, which allows you to record text without keys, with a 3.2MP camera with LED flash.

Users will be able to listen to directions wherever they are thanks to the VZ Navigator GPS navigation program.

Outdoors, they can access seven useful features, such as Earth Compass (compass), Thermometer (thermometer), Star Gazer (astronomical tracking).

Casio G'zOne Ravine will be sold for $ 150 after being reduced to $ 50 in the form of mail discounts and two years of new contracts.

You finished reading the article "Verizon launches a durable phone, G'zOne Ravine" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.
