

Villa Les Cèdres, the most expensive villa in history has nothing special

Villa Les Cèdres - a 187-year-old villa located on the coast of Saint-Jean-Cap-Ferrat (France), 1,672 m², consisting of 14 bedrooms and located on a land of over 14 hectares costing $ 410 million. This is the most expensive building on Earth.

Villa Les Cèdres - a 187-year-old villa located on the coast of Saint-Jean-Cap-Ferrat (France), 1,672 m², consisting of 14 bedrooms and located on a land of over 14 hectares costing $ 410 million. This is the most expensive building on Earth.

1. The skyscraper towers upside down from the top to the foundation in Spain
2. List of 10 tallest skyscrapers in the world today
3. Top 16 skyscrapers have the most "huge" construction budget ever
4. Why do so many skyscrapers in Hong Kong have holes in the middle?

Les Cèdres was built in 1830. In 1904, King Leopold II of Belgium bought and expanded the gardens surrounding the house.

The door of the villa opened a long, winding road, flanked by palm trees and cedar. The statue of the war goddess Athena in bronze is covered with a marble patterned coat placed right at the main entrance.

Once owned by one of the richest kings in European history, the interior is extremely magnificent, large living room, French antique chandeliers, huge wooden and marble fireplaces. Heather, 19th-century style portrait from floor to ceiling with elaborate carved frames.

In addition, the villa also has a wooden floor library with 3,000 books about plants and nature. Including an extremely rare botanical book from the year 1640 and costing up to several hundred thousand Euro.

15 years after Leopold's death, the Marnier-Lapostolle family (famous for its Grand Marnier wine) bought Villa Les Cèdres. In 80 years of ownership, this family has grown many exotic plants to use as raw materials for alcohol production.

Currently, Davide Campari-Milano SpA is a company specializing in the wines of Campari and the Italian Grand Marnier owning Villa Les Cèdres.

It is the combination of history, elegance and prime location along the coast of Saint-Jean-Cap-Ferrat that makes the villa the most expensive house in history.

Discover the most expensive mansion in the world.

A living room on the ground floor with silk-covered walls.

Another living room at Villa Les Cèdres features a French-style antique chandelier.

A bedroom upstairs.

A garden corner with 14,000 species of plants, including many exotic and rare plants.

A living room with many pictures of 19th century style.

Library room with 3,000 books.

From the balcony you can see the Alps.

This villa owns a garden that is considered one of the top 10 botanical gardens in the world.

Large artificial pond of the villa.

Amazon lily carpet.

You finished reading the article "Villa Les Cèdres, the most expensive villa in history has nothing special" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.