Common types of sink faucets

Based on the design features and characteristics, people divide dishwashing faucets into many different types, of which the most common are:

1. Lavatory faucets: One of the most commonly used types today. The foot of the faucet is sized to fit the hole and synchronize with the sink. Installing a sink-mounted faucet is quite simple, so you can do it yourself at home. Lavatory faucets with two types are cold and hot kitchen faucets.
2. Wall-mounted dishwasher: One end of the faucet is attached to the wall. This type is often suitable for designing in-wall water pipes, protruding an outlet. Because it is attached to the wall, it does not need to be synchronized with the sink.
3. Pressure boosting faucets: The dishwashing pressure boosters are intelligently designed with the spray beam section that can adjust the narrow width of the spray water while supporting, increasing the pressure for stronger ejection.
4. Rigid nozzles : This type has the advantage of being durable but with narrow draining areas.
5. Soft hoses : Can be moved flexibly but not as durable as soft hoses

In addition to the above, based on the number of water lines, we also have dishwashing faucets 1 line, 2 lines, 3 lines. When choosing the type of faucet, you need to see how your water is going, whether the water is weak or strong, etc.
