

Who do you usually sleep with, or with what? That's too nosy Facebook!

Recently, some Facebook users get annoyed when they get a rather curious and nosy question from this social network: who are you sleeping with or what?

Recently, some Facebook users get annoyed when they get a rather curious and nosy question from this social network: who are you sleeping with or what?

In December 2017, Facebook launched the "Did You Know" feature, which encourages users to voluntarily provide more information about themselves and interesting things in life. To do that, Facebook poses harmless questions or makes interesting assumptions for users like " When I don't like a gift, I will . " , or " If it is chosen between possibilities. " the ability to teleport instantly anywhere or read people's thoughts, I will choose . " .

But recently, Facebook has come up with a question that makes users feel annoyed by the excessive curiosity of this social network. The question is: " I usually sleep with . " .

Because the words Facebook uses in this question are too vague for users to think of two different expressions of Facebook, one is to ask about sexual partners and sexual trends, the other is their bed habits. hug teddy bear when sleeping or not .

But most people who get this question argue that Facebook is asking about their sexual partner and they don't like it.

Currently, there has not been any specific explanation from Facebook about this misleading question. Meanwhile, the number of users who accept to share their statuses and updates on their lives on this social network is gradually decreasing. In addition, because of the negative impacts on social life over the past few months, Facebook is currently being closely monitored.

See more:

1. Microsoft will tell you what your data is being collected in Windows 10 in the next update
2. These are all the data about you that the websites you visit collect

You finished reading the article "Who do you usually sleep with, or with what? That's too nosy Facebook!" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.
