

Why not buy a Windows 8 computer?

Consumer Reports, a popular consumer magazine, has written a list of reasons why people should not buy a new Windows 8 computer with Microsoft in the current period.

Consumer Reports, a popular consumer magazine, has written a list of reasons why people should not buy a new Windows 8 computer with Microsoft in the current period.

With Consumer Reports' view, consumers should happily accept their old Windows 7 computer, because Windows 8 now has serious bugs, as well as being able to make users feel uncomfortable with new changes.

According to the consumer magazine, Windows 7 is still a quality computer operating system, updated, and Windows 8 only deserves to be used when users pay for a new PC equipped with a touch screen.

And the lack of a traditional Start button on Windows 8 can make many users 'crazy.'

In addition, Consumer Reports said that Microsoft's new PC operating system still didn't work as smoothly as everyone expected.

Previously, Windows 8 also had to receive criticism from a variety of experts, including a professor from MIT who gave this platform a lot of negative reviews.
