

Windows 10 Insider Preview build 18290 (19H1) with many improvements, invited to download ISO files and experience

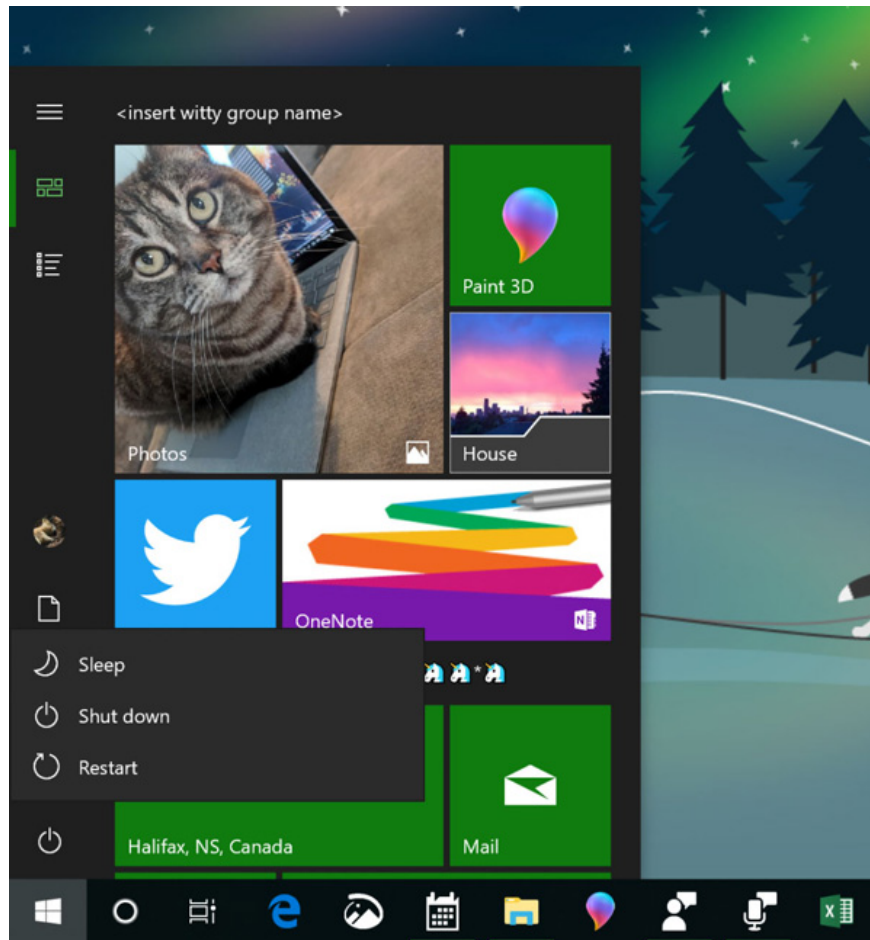

Microsoft recently released Windows 10 Insider Preview build 18290 to the Fast Ring channel with many improvements to provide a better experience for users.

Microsoft recently released Windows 10 Insider Preview build 18290 to the Fast Ring channel with many improvements to provide a better experience for users.

Specifically, the new points included in Windows 10 Insider Preview build 18290 (19H1) include:

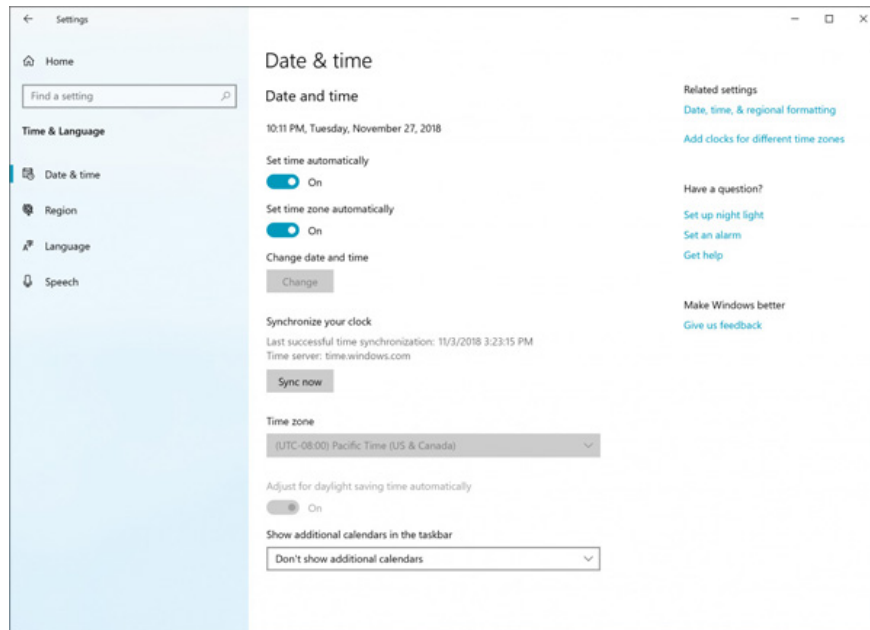

1. Improving the Start interface

On Start, the power button and other parts of the menu continue to be "polished" by Microsoft. At the same time, in the section of manipulating the power button, the company also added new icons to help users more easily identify.

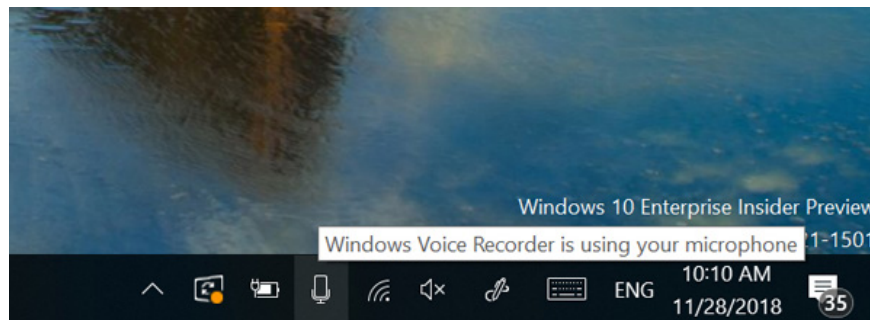

2. Allow users to synchronize time instantly

Microsoft has added the Sync now feature in Synchronize your clock, allowing users to synchronize time immediately, without waiting for the server to synchronize time when selecting automatic time / time zone settings as before. half. Users can access the Settings -> Time & Language -> Date & time -> Synchronize your clock -> Sync now to synchronize the time right away.

However, this instant time synchronization feature is currently only available for devices that have not joined the domain.

3. Identify which applications are using the mic

On build 18290, when you hover over the mic icon, the app name using the microphone will be displayed. To go to the Microphone Privacy installation page, just double-click the icon. When multiple apps use the microphone for a while, only the number of apps is displayed.

Microsoft said this feature will be further improved in a few upcoming updates.

4. Other improvements

Cortana / Search: The welcome window interface of Cortana / Search box is improved.

When there is an update that needs to be rebooted, an orange circle will appear at the Windows Update icon in the notification area to remind you to restart the device.
