

Windows 7's market share for the first time reached more than 50%

Web analytics firm StatCounter has said for the first time Windows 7 has accounted for more than 50% market share in the global computer operating system market.

Web analytics firm StatCounter has said for the first time Windows 7 has accounted for more than 50% market share in the global computer operating system market.

StatCounter pointed out that Windows 7 won 50.2% of the market in June, surpassing 29.9% of the 'predecessor' Windows XP, which is nearly 11 years old so far.

Released nearly 3 years ago, in October 2009, Windows 7 received many positive reviews and compliments.

However, this platform still does not have the bright sublimation like 'sunbaenim,' because the speed of users switching to Windows 7 is quite slow compared to Windows XP, and until now, many people still attached to it. leave this 11-year-old operating system.

It is noteworthy that the achievement for the first time achieved the 'oversold' market share of Windows 7 created only a few months before Microsoft will release its latest operating system Windows 8.

Therefore, Windows 7 is not easy to maintain the outstanding market share as above, because many computer users are anxious to upgrade to Windows 8 version promising many outstanding improvements.

You finished reading the article "Windows 7's market share for the first time reached more than 50%" edited by the TipsMake team. We hope this article has provided you with many useful tech tips and tricks. You can search for similar articles on tips and guides. Thank you for reading and for following us regularly.
