An OTP code will be transferred to the phone number, you need to enter this OTP code then press Confirm. The unique point is that this OTP code input interface has a black background, and the text is also black (make sure others don't see it), so when you enter it you think you don't click eat. Experience is that you just type in the correct OTP digits and press Confirm. If there is a mistake, do it again from the beginning.

Step 5:

The last step Techcombank asked if you printed the bill or not. You choose the print option or not and Enter. That's it, wait for money to be pushed out.

So in case you transfer money and others withdraw at ATM, in step 4 you need to send OTP code for that person to withdraw money.

A few notes:

1. The transfer code is valid for three days.
In case the ATM does not have enough money to withdraw or face value of money in the machine does not allow to withdraw enough money, you should re-withdraw the cash transaction at another ATM of Techcombank (the money transfer code remains unchanged).
2. In case you make a mistake more than 3 times (money transfer code, amount), the transfer amount will be blocked and automatically refunded the account after three working days.

Hopefully, this guide will help you withdraw money anywhere, even if you forget to bring your card.

In addition, Techcombank is also the first bank to allow Internet Banking registration at home, you only need a computer connected to the network without having to go to the bank. With Internet Banking you can shop, transfer money, load phone cards on the network a lot easier, try it.

Hope you are successful.
