

YouTube offers 100 Hollywood copyrighted movies with ads

Google recently added a new feature to the YouTube service, allowing users to watch movies for free but in return will have to watch ads.

Google recently added a new feature to the YouTube service, allowing users to watch movies for free but in return will have to watch ads. That means that instead of having to pay to watch movies, users can watch movies for free on YouTube, and ads will appear during the movie watching process, just like video ads still appear on YouTube.

Currently, there are about 100 copyrighted Hollywood movies available on YouTube for free, including classic movies like Rocky, The Terminator, Agent Cody Banks and The Zookeeper. And in the future, the number of free movies on YouTube will continue to be added more.

The fact that Google offers free movies with advertising on YouTube will help strengthen YouTube's competition with some similar services like Tubi or Vudu of Walmart.

Currently, videos with advertisements are a huge and attractive market, attracting a large number of consumers, making many big men participate.

Currently, the quality of videos and movies available on channels that allow free viewing and advertising are still not satisfactory to users. Hopefully, with the arrival of YouTube, everything will improve.

Currently, in Vietnam has not been updated this new feature of YouTube, but users can use using some IP address change software to enjoy these movies for free.
